The first edition of ECMA-262 (262 is the id number given to the language spec) was then released in June 1997, to a plan for standardizing updates going forward.

bridge the gap between Javascript and Jscript and establish

It was designed to be compatible with Javascript 1.3

changes were purely cosmetic. They had been added to ES2 was released one year later in June 1998, but the

comply with a corresponding ISO version of the spec without changing the specification for the language itself, so it's typically omitted from compatibility tables.
